HAPPY NEW YEAR

Well it's another year over and we are a year older if we like it or not, but what is important is that we are here to talk about it. It's time to start thinking about the New Year and things to do like rendezvous, lets outdo last year!

It also means that I become P/C this year! It has been an honor the last two years to serve as your Commander. Without all of your devotion where would we be? I could start naming names but the list would be long and would name just about our whole Squadron, along with quite a few from other Squadrons as well. This is what SCSSPS is all about, working together and having a lot of fun doing it. We probably would not have bought another boat, but joining the Squadron gave us a reason to do more overnight cruises. I cannot "THANK" everyone enough!

The CHANGE OF WATCH IS coming up and it is another chance to get together and a chance to give support to the Bridge and Board Members of the past year and to bring in our FULL Bridge for 2013. I am sure our New Commander for 2013 (Bonnie Krieg, AP) will add to the future of our Squadron (I know her quite well)☺

Thanks Again for all of your support,
P/C Bob

Hi All,

I want to wish you all a Happy & Safe Holiday & New Year.

It's that time of year again where we need to get ready for the 2013 Detroit Boat Show. The show runs from February 16th through Sunday the 24th. This Show promises to be the Largest Boat Show of all, as they had to rent more space to accommodate all the entrants that applied this year.

Please see the schedule (attached) and let me know what times and dates you would like, and let me know as soon as you can, so we can accommodate everyone.

Thank You,

Safety Tips -article from the web

With the water temps dropping and winter on the way thought I would share a tip that was passed on to me that could save a life.

From what I have read on this board it appears that most of us wear life jackets when fishing. I usually don't in the summer but always do in the fall and winter. The problem is that a life jacket is TOTALY useless in the winter if you don't have a means to get back into the boat after you fall out. If you cant get back in after falling out you would be better off to just drown instead of suffering thru hours of hypothermia.

A friend passed this tip on to me and I will do the same. What we do is find us a wore out ski rope. then rig it to the boat by whatever means you can (trolling motor bracket, boat cleat, etc). You want the rope to be just long enough so you can put your feet in the handle and use it to help you back into the boat. A piece of PVC on a rope with knots on both ends to keep the PVC from moving would work as well. The thing is it must be tied on and ready to use and not stored away in the rod locker. It doesn't take a second to tie it on and you don't even need to keep it in the water. Just keep it where you could reach up and grab it if needed.

I fell in on a duck hunt years ago when I was in the top physical condition of my life. If it had not been for 2 of my college football teammates I could not have gotten back in the boat. I would guess that at least 90% of us are in the same boat as far as that is concerned. A 250 pound crappie man in dripping wet coveralls and clothing ends up weighing 400+ to the fishing partner who is trying to pull them back over the side.

Now once back in the boat your still gonna die if you don't get warmed up and quick. What you do there is have a old blanket or comforter vacuum sealed in some plastic. Some cleaners offer this service. You can stash it away in the boat for the winter time trips. I also have a few of the foil blanket body warmer things to help with retaining some heat. And finally a 2 pack of Sterno heaters is a must. The whole survival pack of vacuum sealed comforter, foil blanket and sterno heaters is about the size of a marine battery. It along with the rope ladder cost less than 20 bucks and can save your life.

Bet you spent more than 20 bucks on that new pole, and it cant save your life.
